

Learn it. Earn it. Share it.

Congratulations on earning your ACT® WorkKeys® National Career Readiness Certificate® (NCRC®)!

Digital credentials are fast becoming the common language of verified skills, so you are well on your way to getting noticed for your achievement.

What is a Digital Badge?

A WorkKeys NCRC digital badge from ACT quickly shows the world what you have accomplished and unlike a paper certificate, it's easy to share online!

You have the foundational skills needed for numerous jobs in the market.

Your knowledge and skills can be applied to the workplace.

You are certified by a credible source with more than 30 years championing work readiness for individuals.

What does a WorkKeys NCRC digital badge say about You?

Who will notice?

Employers

Industry Associations

Apprenticeship

Higher Education

Peers

Where can I use a digital badge?

 Digital Transcripts  LinkedIn  Facebook  Website  Twitter  Email Signature

5 Things You Should Do Next!

1

Share their achievements on social media.

Let your colleagues, coworkers, and friends know about your achievements by posting on LinkedIn, Facebook, and other social media sites.

2

Update your resume and online portfolios.

Digital credentials are verified proof of your skills. Add your digital badges to your resume ASAP. That way, employers looking for candidates with your skills can find you.

3

Take the next step in learning.

Learning doesn't have to stop here. Keep going! Is there a course that can build on your skills? Look at recommended badges for further study.

4

Go for that promotion.

Employers are making talent decisions based on verified skills. Let your manager or HR department know you've been honing your skills and share your digital credentials with them.

5

Look into the labor market and apprenticeships.

Where is the demand for individuals who have the skills you just certified? Check out the jobs and industries associated with your WorkKeys NCRC on jobprofiles.act.org or Credly's labor market insights.

